HEAVY-WEIGHTS IN THE RING

FOUR ROUGH-AND-TUMBLE ROUNDS FOUGHT WITHOUT RESULT.

Two Fat Men from Philadelphia Battle for a Purse of $62.50 in a Long Island Sporting Resort-The Proprietor Ends the Mill by Turning Off the Gas-The

Some forty club and sporting men and some that were neither were witnesses of the hard-glove contest to a finish, under Queensberry rules, between Denny Kelliher and Mike Boden, both Philadelphia heavyweights, for $150, that took place in a wellknown Long Island resort early this morn-

The battle was fought in four rounds, which lasted, including the time spent wrangling incident to a stake in one corner of the ring giving way and an invasion of the inclosure by a crowd crazed with liquor and with excitement, just 19 minutes and 35 sec-

Then the proprietor of the hotel, who had run around the ring mixed up hopelessly now and then with the struggling combatants carrying a long gas-lighter, turned out the gas and there was even more confusion. Steve Brodie, Boden's second, relighted the burners, and one more round was fought in rough and tumble style, owing to Boden's clinching, hugging and trying to wrestle, de-spite Referee Pete Donohue's orders to "break."

The proprietor ended the round by turning off the gas again, as the excited crowd was making enough noise to be heard over at the City Hall.

The referee refused to give a decision and

The referee refused to give a decision and said the men must fight it out inside of twenty-four hours. Kelliher refused to go on with the match. He said that he would give Boden the fight provided he got his third of the purso.

The men were matched some time ago at Charlie Norton's place in Newark. Both are known sluggers. Each has contested with such men as Pat Killen, George Le Blanche, Jack Dempsey, Pete McCov and Patsy Cardiff.

Jack Dempsey, Pete McCov and Patsy Cardiff.

After the men were brought to the battle ground there was a hitch about the purse and it looked at one time as if there would be no fight. Relliher sensibly refused to fight to a finish for $50, all that there was in the ticket box, although offering to meet his opponent in a ten-round set-to, with two-ounce gloves for that amount.

Just as everybody was getting ready to go home Kelliher was coaxed into fighting for a small additional amount that had been raised. There was a dispute over the referee, Frank Stevenson refusing to act. Pete Donohue consented, and Bob Turnbull was appointed timekeeper for both men.

He said that he weighed 135 pounds, but he looked much larger. He wore white fighting breeches and laced shoes. Steve Brodie and Martin Dempsey seconded him.

weighed 260 pounds. Johnny Mullen, the clever Philadelphia ex-light-weight, and Billy Johnson were the seconds. Both principals were terribly fat.

The fighting was fast and furious from the start. Boden, who stands right hand and right foot first, had the worst of it in the opening rounds, but evened up matters in the third and fourth rounds. Not much blood was spilled, but the men administered punishing thumps, and went to the floor repeatedly from knockdowns as well as in clinches, which were plentiful.

Boden was knocked through the ropes once in a rally in the first round, and soon afterwards he was knocked down again and Kelliher fell over him. Kelliher swung in two good right-hand blows early in the second round, but Boden evaded most of their force. Then the Canuck landed two tremendous left-handers on the larger man's stomach and eft-handers on the larger man's stomach and gained a knockdown of Kelliher at the ropes. Boden was on top as they fell together at the close of the round.

Boden secured a knockdown early in the third round, but caught Kelliher way below the waist in a clinch, when Kelliher renewed the fighting.

the maist in a clinch, when Kelliher renewed the fighting.

They broke away better in the fourth round, but the fighting was so savage and exciting, and so many of the spectators had patronized the landlord's bar to excess during the long wait before the fight, that the gas had to be turned off to prevent a certain riot.

Kelliher was blamed for not wanting to continue the battle after the impossibility of its being brought to a conclusion this morning was evident, but when the size of the actual purse. $62,50, is considered, there is litto wonder at.

INPECIAL TO THE WOMED. PHILADELPHIA, April 4.—Ex-Attorney-Gen. eral Benjamin Harris Brewster died here this DR. RANNEY GIVES EXPERT TESTIMONY morning shortly after 1 o'clock of disease of the kidneys after an illness of three weeks.

Benjamin Harris Brewster was born in Salem County, N. J.. Oct. 18, 1816. Graduating at Princeton in 1834, he was admitted in 1836 to the Philadelphia Bar, of which he has ever since been Philadelphia Bar, of which he has ever since been an ornament.

In 1946 Mr. Brewster was appointed by President Polk a Commissioner to examine into the claims of the Cherokee Indians against the United States. During the two years' term beginning in 1869, Mr. Brewster was Attorney-General of the State of Pennsylvania. Here, as well as in his private practice in Philadelphia, he acquired a high reputation as an able and zealous prosecutor, and in December, 1881, President Artuur appointed him to be Attorney-General of the United States.

In this distinguished office Mr. Brewster served until 1885, during the whole period of the Star Route prosecutions, through which he became known all over the United States.

Mr. Brewster went into those celebrated cases with much energy and declared his disappointment at their termination without a vindication of justice.

with much energy and declared his disappointment at their termination without a windication of juatice.

It was, however, in his private life that this remarkable man was most notable. In costume, habit and personal appearance he was alike peculiar. But it is to be said that there was never a breath against his honor, and that he deserved the success he achieved under many obstacles at a bar famous for "Philadelphia iswyers."

When a mere child Mr. Brewster was dropped into an open fireplace by the carelessness of his nurse and received facial injuries of which he bore the marks until his death, and which gave him the sorbriques of "Burnt Brewster."

He was devoted to his mother, and to ber constant encouragement he ascribed the perseverance with which be fought his way up in the world and strove to overcome the disadvantages under which his remarkable disfigurement placed him,

Mr. Brewster was a social as well as professional leader in Philadelphia. His second wife died several years ago and left him one son, a handsome lad, who has since been constantly seen in his fainer's company and for whom the ex-Attorney-General felt a pathetic affection.

Mrs. Brewster was a daughter of ex-Secretary of the Treasury Walker, of Massisippi, but when she married Mr. Brewster she was a cierk in one of the Washington departments, from which position she stepped to the high social one of the wife of a Cabinet officer.

Mr. Brewster wore until his death the style of nigh white beaver hat in voque in the year 1840, and had his head covernings made to order from a special block. Ruffed shirt-bosoms and waistbands, with lace frilling, after the gallant old fashions of a century ago, he also affected, together with a luxuriance in waistcoats that made him a marked figure on the streets of any city. He shaved himself closely every day, and entertained strict ideas of what a gentleman should do, say, eat, drink and wear.

She was refused membership.

Lawyer Marsh was said to be in his study this morning, peacefully contemplating his spirit pictures and letters, while the Diss Debars and Lawrences held undisputed sway over the rest of the house.

The Sweetest Girl in School.

"She's the sweetest girl in school!" enthusiastically exclaimed one young miss to another as they passed down the street together. "Edith is so kind and gentle and unselfish every one likes her. The girls skipped along, but it happened Sdith's mother had heard what they said. It set her thinking. What could be done for those headaches and the rough, muddy complexion that were such a trial to her gentle daughter? Sherecalled what she had read of Ds. Pisnow's Golden Medical Discovery, and on the spur of the moment she siuped into a drug store and bought a supply. Edith took it faithfully, with the result that it cleared her disordered blood, relieved the beadaches, made her skin soft, fair and roay, and now she is not only "the sweetest girl in school" but the most beautiful. EX-ATTORNEY-GENERAL BREWSTER DEAD. | PITTMAN'S MENTAL BALANCE

IN THE MURDER TRIAL.

The Mental Condition of Pittman's Father Does Not Necessarily Prove Insanity in the Son-A Man May Be Insune One Day Watching the Proceedings Closely.

Like an avenging spirit Rebecca Fream sat with note-book in hand in the ladies' box at the trial of Francis W. Pitt man again to-day. The man who claims to have killed his daughter while temporarily insane, made so by his anxiety concerning her friendship with a married man, gave the impression yesterday that he was of a temperament similar to that of the spinster.

Dr. J. W. Ranney, who was called to the witness-stand as a specialist and expert in insanity cases, swore that the fact that Pittman's father died insane would induce him to the belief that actions of the son not normal were insane acts.

That the father had had charge of a ship That the father had had charge of a ship voyaging between America and Europe would modify that belief to a certain extent. On cross-examination by Mr. Fitzgerald, Dr. Ranney said that moral insanity was a derangement of the emotions and feelings, without affecting the mental faculties. In moral insanity the intellect is unable to control the moral faculty. He cited Modgely and Pritchard in support of this statement. Dr. Ranney had never heard of any one who became insane because of fear of hydrophobis, but had known cases in which one was sane one day and insane the next. The habit of biting and clipping off words in his speech were not symptoms of cinsanity in Pittman. Loss of memory of recent events is not a sympton of dementia, but cent events is not a sympton of dementia, but cent events is not a sympton of dementia, but of acute insanity.

To Recorder Smyth Dr. Ranney said that a man might be worried and insomnolent; he might walk the house at night and be unable to eat anything for days together and yet be perfectly sane.

"Now, you don't mean to testify, even as a matter of opinion, that on Aug. 4 last this prisoner was in such a condition of mind that he pas unable to determine right from wrong, do you?" asked the Recorder.

Dr. Ranney replied to this that Pitmann's mind might have been competent.

Then to Mr. Ecclesine the doctor said that the strain on Pittman's mind, as predicated in the testimony, might produce insanity in some temperaments, and to Mr. Fitzgerald acknowledged that there were no such cases in the book—adding that such cases were classified under the head of "fear."

No Salaries for the Teachers

There is considerable apprehension on the part of he teachers of the Middletown District School No. , at Stapleton, S. The last money received by them was for the month of January, and for some unaccountable reason the Board of School Trustees has withheld the pay for the past two months. There has been some ill-feeling among the Trustees for more than a year past which originated from the appointing of the son of Henry Burke, the Chairman of the Board of School Trustees, to the position of janitor of the school building. "The stoppage of work has done great injury," said Warden Brush last night. "The loss, of course, is not to be measured by what we did not do during that time. The gecates loss is from the demoralization of the industry. These interruptions are bad because it throws the prisoners out of their habits of industry and makes them discontented. The eighty citizens we had here as instructors and foremen are, as a rule, the very best of their kind. Some of them, I know, have got other jobs before this, and I expect others will go when they can get piaces. All these causes tend to reduce the production and also the quality of the work.
